Blackbeard the Pirate

Blackbeard, aka Edward Teach, Thatch or Drummond — depending on the researcher, was born around 1680 in Bristol, a British port town. "Edward Teach" is the most commonly accepted name. Little is known about the budding Blackbeard, but he could read and write, indicating that his family had money. Most pirate researchers believe his father was a privateer and that young Teach followed in his footsteps, launching his privateering "career" in Jamaica.

Privateers worked as legalized pirates, hired by governments during time of war to attack the ships of the enemy. Queen Anne of Britain allowed Teach to plunder French and Spanish ships during the War of the Spanish Succession — and to keep stolen goods.

By the time Britain withdrew from the war in 1713, Teach had become quite adept at the art of pillaging and plundering. Like many other privateers, he found himself unemployed with the war's end. While some went home to do reputable things, Blackbeard joined with other wayward pirates in the Caribbean, roving the seas for bounty.

— Ghost Stories —

In 2007, Corpus Christi Ghosthunters captured 'the holy grail' of paranormal researchers — an apparition strolling through the back dining area hours after the restaurant had closed. His (her?) appearance emerged from a wall. Check it out on: ccspookcentral.com under 2007 investigations.

In September 2008, with Hurricane Ike threatening the Gulf Coast, Blackbeard's closed. Unbeknownst to anyone, however, the place was rocking during that stormy night. The next morning, our general manager opened the restaurant to find the stereo blaring at its highest setting and the AC blasting at its lowest temperature.

Jumping salt shakers, eerie noises and other ghostly activities have helped define Blackbeard's since we opened in 1991. Early on, we began leaving a jigger of Jose Cuervo at the bar each night to appease our unseen, mischievous visitor. If you're here at closing one night, watch for this nightly ritual — and possibly more.
